DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The claims recite spherical particles "consisting essentially of a rare-earth element (inclusive of yttrium)-containing compound." However, yttrium does not traditionally fall within the classification of a rare-earth element (See attachment): It is therefore unclear exactly what elements can be used to make the claimed spherical particles.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-2, and 5-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Keneyoshi et al. (JP 08-119632).

Keneyoshi et al. discloses spherical particles of oxide of a rare earth element useful as powder for thermal spraying (abstract). The particle diameters can fall within the range 10 to 80 μm (paragraphs 16-20). Since the materials disclosed by Keneyoshi et al. are the same as that disclosed in the present application, the examiner takes the position that the claimed breaking strength and bulk density will be inherently met by the prior art spherical particles. Spherical particles, by their very definition, would have a uniform particle diameter and therefore have an aspect ratio of 1. Since Keneyoshi et al. does not disclose the presence of any pores, the examiner takes the position that none or only negligible amounts exist in the prior art spherical particles and therefore meet the claimed pore volume requirement.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 3-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Keneyoshi et al.

Keneyoshi et al. does not specifically disclose the claimed particle size distribution or dispersion index. However, in the absence of establishing criticality or unexpected results, one skilled in the art would have found it obvious to adjust these properties to within the claimed range. The motivation for doing so would have been to optimize the spraying capability of the spherical particles.
